

The key to success

It has never been easy to be patient, but it's probably harder now than at any time in history. In this modern society many of us are hooked on the internet, which provides the constant possibility of searching anything, anywhere, and at any time. Have you ever thought about how the internet can be connected with patience ?

As we can get information and things done as fast as we want to (or at least as fast as the internet connection is) we get incredibly impatient at a moment we have to wait for something. And I'm not talking about waiting for days not even hours. Actually, I mean a period of just a few minutes.

Patience is very important while it can also influence your relationships. As we know, being patient with others is a form of respect. Nobody is perfect and if you want to be a good parent, boss or friend it's quite useful to realise it.

In my opinion, it's wise and helpful to acquire this virtue because it really pays off. Nevertheless, it's easier said than done. At the beginning, it may be difficult to practise, but just carry on. For every minute you are angry you lose 60 seconds of happiness.
